

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A beam shaping device shapes a light beam from a light source to have a circular cross section, and changes the refractive index thereof by causing an electric field to be produced by a voltage applied to electrodes thereof. In this way, the light beam from the light source is deflected, and an objective lens gathers the shaped and deflected light beam to expose the light beam to an optical disk.